

Sharp & to the Point

The Hock Tools Newsletter

In-the-Spotlight: Some Call them Utility Knives.

from #7/2015

Did you know that Hock Tools carving, marking and violin knives appeal to non-woodworkers — regular people, like me?

I happen to use a #VK025 — the Hock Tools 1/4" Violin Knife — in my sewing kit. I also use a #CK100 — the Hock Tools small Carving Knife — in the kitchen.

So, yeah, Hock knives are handy utility knives.

Perhaps you already knew that because you slice tape and string, and open boxes — and other little jobs I probably don't want to know about — using that handy blade on your bench. These types of knives are just useful — being the next best thing to tooth and claw, they are almost primal!

But, as you know, these small blades were specifically designed for wood-working tasks and that's why woodworkers really know what to do with them!

Take for instance the #VK075 Donald Rogers put a handle on. You just know he uses this for a marking knife and it has that look a tool has when it is the type of tool that takes on numerous jobs.

Side view of Donald Rogers' #VK075 - Violin Knife with handle.

Donald Rogers took his #VK075 - the Hock Tools 3/4" Violin Knife -- and put a beautiful handle on it. It fits his hand, looks sharp, and is sharp! And this knife is extremely versatile.

And that's why, whether you call them utility blades, carving, marking knives, or violin knives!

Hock blades are great tools in your shop. And they make thoughtful gifts from you to your friends, woodworkers and regular people, too!

Top view of Donald Rogers' #VK075,
The Hock Tools 3/4" Violin Knife with handle.

It's a matter of inspiration. Hock Tools Violin Knives, beveled on both sides, right or left side only.

Thank you for Choosing Hock Tools

Hock Tools The Sharpening Blog The Perfect Edge